MISS 1150 LE PITCH

This 11.50-metre houseboat is a Miss 1150, built in 1987 by the Esquerré yard. Its flat-bottomed GRP hull draws only 80 centimetres: it can go anywhere on the inland waterways, including where keeled boats have to turn back.
The Miss 1150 belongs to the line of the “Burgundy Miss” boats, the houseboats of the Esquerré yard — later Navig-France — that shaped inland boating in the 1980s, and whose design was later continued as the Espade 11.50. The standard version had a 28 hp engine; this one was fitted with twice that, which makes all the difference as soon as there is a current.
The layout comes down to one word: space. Two metres of headroom from one end of the boat to the other, two cabins each with a double bed, a shower room with shower and electric toilet, and a gas galley — hob, oven and a fridge that runs on gas as well as on 12 V or 220 V. Heating is by forced air and the insulation is 5 to 8 centimetres thick. Where the standard version squeezed in four cabins and nine berths, this one has been refitted with two proper cabins: the same volume, for half as many people.
Forward, a wide half-moon deck with its sheltered central well serves as a terrace; the side decks are covered and closed with curtains, which doubles the living space as soon as the weather turns fine.
The engine is a 58 hp Fiat Iveco from 1987, intercooled, with a wet exhaust and shaft drive, using about 4 litres an hour. The engine oil and filters were changed in 2022, and the hull was repainted below the waterline the same year.
The tanks are generous for the size of the boat: 300 litres of diesel and 800 litres of drinking water in two tanks, twice what the model carried originally.
The boat is moored at H2O, in Saint-Jean-de-Losne.
